Groundbreaking Begins Long-Awaited Resort

The Tribe will break ground for its new hotel on February 4th at 2 p.m., with a blessing, speakers, singing, drumming and dancing, outdoors at the construction site west of 7 Cedars Casino, with a reception following inside the Casino.

“This is an important day for us, not only because we are finally starting construction of our long-awaited hotel, but also because it is the 24th anniversary of 7 Cedars Casino, a milestone we celebrate annually,” said Tribal Council Chair/CEO Ron Allen.

A webcam will be onsite during construction, to allow the public to watch the building progress and to document the entire process. The Tribe is working with Rice Fergus Miller Architecture on architecture and design choices – using natural elements spanning including water, land, trees and sky – that will visually tell the story of the Pacific Northwest, and our northwest region tribes’ history and culture. Swinerton Builders, a commercial construction company based in San Francisco, will build the facility, using local sub-contractors whenever possible. The hotel is expected to open in May 2020, when it will also begin accepting bookings for meeting space as early as the summer of 2020. This first phase of the hotel will feature 100 rooms, including

Coppage Graduates from Marine Training

Tribal descendant Mason Coppage, son of Ginnie Kitzmiller (Cook-Kardonsky), graduated from the Marine Corps Recruit training at Marine Corps Recruit Training Depot San Diego on December 21st, after successfully completing a 13-week boot camp. Upon graduation, his title changed from “recruit” to “Marine.”

The final leg of the training was a 54-hour exercise called The Crucible, which included traveling 48 miles, carrying 45 pounds of gear, completing 36 warrior stations and 29 team-building exercises, with only 6 hours of sleep and 2 MREs (meals ready to eat). During the first hour of this grueling exercise (which took place during a very rare storm that brought 4-inches of rain), Mason tore both menisci in his knee, and completed The Crucible anyway. “He didn’t want to let anyone down, or move backwards in his career,” explained his mother. Upon completion of the final 9-mile uphill hike, the recruits were given their Eagle, Globe and Anchor pins, the symbol of every Marine. “He actually loved boot camp, overall,” she said. “He was in shape, neat, and ready for discipline. During the first half, it was hard to adjust to the new environment, but then he said he became even more excited about his future. He changed a lot in a very short time – he is now more humble, more patient, more likely to listen than to speak.”

A 13-member group of Mason’s family traveled to San Diego for his graduation, where they, along with 500 other families, celebrated the accomplishments of their newly minted Marines, met their drill sergeants and other personnel, and enjoyed the services available on base.

“Got to spend 5 hours with him on base during family day, and the entire experience was quite wonderful, but very busy,” said Kitzmiller. Mason had signed up in June, and expected to be called to boot camp in January. But he put himself on an “on-call” list to be contacted if an earlier space opened up.

“They called him at 1 p.m. on September 23rd, and he had to be at the Silverdale Recruiting station that evening,” she said. Recruits bring only the clothes they are wearing, their identification and social security cards. Everything else is provided when they arrive at the training location. Kitzmiller joined a parent support group as soon as he was called, to share the experience with other parents who were in the same situation – out of contact with their child, and worried about how each was faring.

Coppage had been leaning toward a military career since his freshman year of high school in Port Angeles, when he began researching the various branches of service available, and the jobs and resources available to him and his family. By sophomore year, he began a workout regimen to get fit, going to the gym, eating healthy foods, to be prepared for service. When he was a junior, he announced that he wanted to join the Marine Corps. Mason is now at the Broken Marine Program (BMP) undergoing physical therapy for his knee. When that is completed, he will proceed to the School of Infantry (SOI) at Camp Pendleton. At this point he says he would like to be a mortar man or a machine gunner.
Brandi had begun college right after high school, but then took a few years off from school, working for various employers. “I always knew that I wanted to return to college but it was all a matter of timing. A series of events led me back to school, for which I am to this day incredibly grateful,” she said. She pursued her Associate’s degree in Marketing and Graphic Design at The Art Institute of Seattle, while working for Whole Foods Market. She graduated in 2016.

For the past two years, Brandi has worked for Travel Tacoma + Pierce County, a non-profit destination marketing organization that promotes tourism to the Tacoma and Pierce County area. She is the Marketing Manager/Graphic Designer. She creates and oversees the overall brand identity of the organization including annual marketing campaigns, manages their social media, and all creative services that support the destination and brand. It is a very creative and engaging role, she said.

Brandi just celebrated her two-year anniversary with the company and she absolutely loves being a part of an organization that is so community-focused, but reaches out to people from all over the world. “The job that I do now is extremely fulfilling and rewarding. I have learned in my time here that my heart truly belongs in a non-profit organization such as this. No day is the same here at Travel Tacoma. I manage our leisure and group market, meaning I create and art direct all of the advertising and collateral that we use, including print and digital, producing videos, managing our social media, working with outside sources (marketing & PR firms),” she said.

Since she is the only in-house designer at our organization, Brandi relies heavily on her co-workers and peers for feedback.

“Typically, when I begin a new project, I call a meeting with everyone involved and we discuss the outcome we are trying to achieve, as well as how it will be shown to the world. Having good communication skills is key in a creative role like this. There may be from 4-8 or more people involved in a process like this. It requires great communication, art direction, the ability to handle constructive criticism.”

“I quickly learned to give myself tough skin right out of college. I have always been a very creative person but sometimes in a role like this, I am often asked to create things that might not be my style, or clients will ask for things that do not always make the most sense. It is crucial to be able to understand and meet their expectations.”

“Continuing my education has allowed for all of this to happen. For some reason I just never thought I would find myself in such a cool position. This role allows me to express my creativity in promoting the community that I have lived in my entire life! I am insanely grateful to my Tribe and for all of the amazing support I received along the way. I can’t express how much continuing my education has helped pave the way to where I am now.”

Brandi is from the Hall family. Her great grandfather was Lowell "Lovey" Hall. Her grandmother (his daughter) was Donna Mary LaPointe (Hall) and her husband was Bernard Boyd LaPointe from the Chippewa Tribe. Her father (their son) is James Brian LaPointe and her mother is Kimberly Michelle LaPointe. Brandi’s sister Taylor also utilized Jamestown’s higher education program, earning her Associate of Arts degree from Pierce College with a Certificate in Social Service Mental Health.
The North Olympic Salmon Coalition (NOSC) honored 10 years of hard work and the partnerships made along the way in its 3 Crabs nearshore and estuarine restoration project at a ribbon cutting ceremony on Dec. 18 at the estuary off 3 Crabs Road.

This restoration project is one of many NOSC has implemented in various areas throughout the Olympic Peninsula and was made possible by 29 stakeholders and supporters involved in the project, at a cost of about $4.2 million to design, permit and construct the project, for the goal of long-term restoration of salmon.

The ceremony kicked off with a special opening by Jamestown S’Klallam Tribe citizens Kurt Grinnell and his daughter Loni Grinnell-Greninger, who sang a verse from S’Klallam “Happy Song.”

The Jamestown S’Klallam Tribe is one of the many partners involved in the project, along with the North Olympic Land Trust, the Washington State Recreation & Conservation Office, and many more.

The goal for this project was to restore salmon access to the marsh by removing structures from the area, such as infrastructure, fill and armoring at the site of the former 3 Crabs Restaurant.

The project also created a public access point from 3 Crabs Road at a newly established WA Dept. of Fish and Wildlife area along the Dungeness Bay and Meadowbrook Creek, which enters Dungeness Bay about 1/3 mile east of the Dungeness River mouth and provides rearing habitat for out-migrating Dungeness River salmon. The idea is to restore habitat where juvenile salmon can grow and get as big as possible before swimming out to sea.

The Tribe provided technical assistance during the design phase and provided NOSC with graphical materials to assist with their grant applications. During construction, the Tribe collected and safely relocated salmon and other fish from the construction areas.

The Dungeness estuary and Dungeness Bay support an average of 7,500 waterfowl during migration and winter, the organization’s website says, and the habitat restoration of this area benefits a variety of waterfowl species by improving access to habitat types.

The project has restored ecological function to over 40 acres of coastal wetlands and one-half mile stream channel.

To learn more about the project, visit the North Olympic Salmon Coalition’s website at https://nosc.org/.

Your Participation is Needed to Determine Future Tribal Housing Opportunities

Tribal citizen responses from the recent Demographic Survey and Community Assessment revealed that 13% of our population has had difficulty in getting or keeping permanent housing, 19% of out-of-area households reported an intention to return to the Tribe’s service area by 2020, and 34% of our community wanted information on senior housing options. We know there is a housing shortage in Clallam and Jefferson Counties, and the Tribe wants to be part of the solution to that problem.

In response to this information, the Tribe applied for and received funding from the Administration for Native Americans to embark on a Housing Solutions Study. This study will be based on the responses of our Tribal community, to determine your preferences for design, location, amenities and ownership of housing. It is your opportunity to tell your housing stories, and voice your opinions loud and clear, so that everyone’s preferences for future housing options are considered in this very important study.

With that information, Beckwith Consulting Group will compile a Housing Solutions Strategy document that will analyze and outline potential locations, land availability, zoning, acquisition/construction costs, financing options and incentives, funding sources, and need, in terms of quantities of units, all within our Service Area. Then, the Tribe will work to provide housing to match the needs expressed by the community. We hope that these will include affordable housing, transitional/emergency housing, Elder/disabled housing, and workforce housing.

The first and most important step in this process is engaging our Tribal community and hearing your past housing struggles and your housing dreams for the future. To achieve that goal, our Project Director, SCS Planner Linda Brenner, will hold a kick-off meeting on Thursday Feb. 7th, including interested Tribal citizens and descendants, local housing agencies, Tribal staff (including those involved with the project, and those who might need housing), and the consulting firm. This important meeting will introduce everyone to one another, lay out a plan, and begin scheduling the next step. Focus groups and charrettes (a meeting in which all stakeholders in a project attempt to resolve conflicts and map solutions) are your opportunity to be heard. Come to the kick-off meeting to learn more, and this spring, when you are asked to attend a focus group or charrette, say “yes!”

If you cannot come to the kick-off, and want to participate in this project, contact Linda Brenner at lbrenner@jamestowntribe.org or Luke Strong-Cvetich at lstrong@jamestowntribe.org to be certain that you are included.
Storage Facility Benefits Tribe

Carlsborg Self Storage serves a need for the Tribe as well as for community members in need of extra storage space. The business, purchased by the Tribe in 2011 with 182 units, was upgraded in 2018 with 40 new units. “The Tribe rents about 10-15% of our capacity,” said Hawk Grinnell, Finance Manager for the Tribe’s Economic Development Authority, which manages the business. Most recently, four of the new, two-story units were filled with two important Tribal collections – our document and photograph archives in one 14 x 40-foot unit managed by Tribal Historic Preservation Officer David Brownell; and our cedar totem and lumber storage in three 14 x 45-foot units, managed by Woodcarver/Artisan and Signage Manager Bud Turner.

The archive storage is temperature and humidity controlled, to preserve the Tribe’s important papers. More documents are added as they are donated, scanned and catalogued. Members of the Culture Committee recently visited the archive, and Brownell pulled out a few photographs for them to view. Immediately, Tribal Elder Elaine Grinnell (Prince) was taken back to her childhood, and began naming the people in the photos and recalling stories of the Shaker Church, stealing strawberries from Billy Hall’s field, and her memories of members of other Tribes visiting Jamestown, some of whom are pictured in the old photos.

The cedar storage area has been outfitted with huge racks with roller shelves that make moving 2,500-pound cedar logs a breeze. Turner is thrilled to have all of his wood consolidated in one secure area. Prior to this, much of it was outdoors under tarps, and subject to the weather. Moving the wood into the units was a major feat that took place in December. “These units are a great example of the teamwork between the EDA, Jamestown Excavating, and several Tribal departments. It is a wonderful mix of business, public relations, art, status and a spiritual connection to share with our community,” said Grinnell. “Excavating built the racks to create a structure suitable for the totems, the blank slates that are used to tell our Tribal stories and represent our culture and our spirit as a people. I couldn’t be more proud to be involved in this project.”

The Jamestown S’Klallam Tribe plans to resume its Pacific oyster farm in Dungeness Bay. The S’Klallam people have for centuries cultivated and harvested shellfish there, both before and after the State Department of Natural Resources began leasing the property for commercial shellfish aquaculture in 1953. The Jamestown S’Klallam Tribe secured the lease in the 1990’s when it purchased The Oyster House and continued operations until a decline in water quality largely due to upland sources forced the Tribe to suspend farming operations in the early 2000s.

In collaboration with many local partners, the Tribe secured more than $2 million in grant funding for the express purpose of improving water quality to resume oyster farming. The Tribe is now required to secure local and federal permits because our operations were suspended when new regulations were adopted. In May 2018, the Jamestown S’Klallam Tribe requested a 6-month delay on the local permit process following a decision by the US Army Corp of Engineers (USACE) to require an individual instead of a nationwide permit. Clallam County’s permitting relies on biological evaluations conducted in the federal permit process. The request to put the local process on-hold was approved, and the County withdrew its determination until the Tribe submitted the updated application materials. Culturally, the Jamestown S’Klallam Tribe strives to balance economic gain with environmental concerns, exceeding environmental and habitat standards.

The Tribe acquired additional information both specific to the lease site and on broader topics of concern. Here is a recap of our findings:

| Potential impacts to birds and other wildlife | There is no historic evidence that oyster aquaculture has had a negative impact on refuge birds or other wildlife. The project minimizes disturbances to foraging birds. |
| Plastic pollution in the marine environment | The plastics used in shellfish aquaculture are not a primary source of marine pollution. Further, the Tribe intends to reduce the use of plastics as new materials are developed. |
| Detrimental increase in nitrogen-based waste | Farming less than 3% of Inner Dungeness Bay should not have a negative impact on nitrogen levels. Oysters are known to have remarkable water filtration capabilities with a potential to benefit water quality in Dungeness Bay. |
| Changes to tidal flats | Proposed farming activities are not likely to result in negative changes to the sediments or organisms associated with the project site. |

All permit materials have been submitted and are available at Clallam County. A hearing is scheduled for March 20th, preceded by at least a 30-day public comment period that will be announced in the media. Once the comment period opens, you can find it at www.clallam.net.

Over the years, installing dozens of totem poles for the Tribe and other entities, Jamestown Excavating has become expert at totem installation. “With a great display of respect to the history of the Tribe’s ancestors, this project has provided security for the continuance of the Tribe’s preservation and cultural endeavor,” said Grinnell.
Greetings Tribal Citizens! Last month, I talked about the perspective of moving through 2019 as a fresh start with all the exciting projects around our Jamestown community. Without a doubt, the 7 Cedars Resort project is generating the most excitement. But I am equally excited about all the other projects that balance out the many needs for the operations that serve our community.

As we go into February, we are still struggling with the federal government in a “Trump Shut-down” causing a lot of problems for all 573 American Indian and Alaska Native Nations across the country. Typically, the Tribes receive their federal funds between October and December. This shutdown is delaying it deep into our fiscal year causing cash flow problems. It is also slowing our access to other federal funds that require the government to process the contracts and grants.

I mentioned last month that Tribes have a “Political” foundation in America, as opposed to the “Race-based” status advocated by the attorney(s) representing the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS). This is an old argument that Tribes have consistently countered. Some in the political and legal arena would like to shift our relationship in America to a “race-based” one. While Indian Tribes are among the diverse ethnic makeup of America, our Indigenous Peoples standing as political, sovereign nations is unique in our 500-year relationships on the North American continent and the 242 years of the United States of America.

Some recent good news came from the Health and Human Services’ Center for Medicare & Medicaid (CMS) where this old challenge surfaced. They recently approved the Arizona exemption waiver for the work requirement for those Tribal citizens eligible for Medicaid. This is positive development resulting from over a year of efforts to convince them that their attorneys were wrong regarding Tribal status for access to federal health care programs.

The problem with this development is it only applies to Indians who are enrolled. There are tens of thousands of Indians not enrolled for a variety of reasons, and most of these people are located in Urban communities. We have been advocating for Indian Health Service (IHS) definition for eligibility that would include those individuals. They are most commonly economically disadvantaged families needing health care. This is one of the key group the Affordable Health Care Act was targeting.

Our national concern about the “political” vs “race-based” is that it undermines a long-standing legal status of our Tribal governments (and people we represent) that is firmly based in our US Constitution within the Commerce Clause. There are many federal legal cases that have affirmed this standing (including the original Marshall Trilogy cases in the early 1800s and the Morton v. Mancari case in 1974). But as often is the case, some legal and political individuals are offended by the unique standing of the Indigenous Peoples of our nation and would like to change that status.

To say the obvious, most if not all our federal programs and rights including BIA, IHS, and HUD programs, as well as our gaming, fishing, hunting, cultural and traditional rights are rooted in this political, legal foundation. Efforts to shift that status to a racially-based status threaten the very foundation of our sovereignty and self-governance.

It is always challenging to stay focused on local efforts and projects while staying united in the Northwest and in Indian Country to defend our sovereignty and treaty rights. But some things never change.

In 2019 we will continue to push back against racism, bigotry and other challenges in our society, we will continue to work collaboratively with NCAI and our other regional and national Intertribal organizations to protect our Richard, a lifelong resident of the area, passed away peacefully at his Port Townsend home on December 9 surrounded by family.

Richard was born in Port Townsend on January 19, 1928, to Orville and Madeline (Bishop) Twiggs. He attended Chimacum schools until he joined the Merchant Marines at the age of 17 in 1945. He was a WWII veteran. Richard worked for Crown Zellerbach and affiliates for over 40 years, mostly in the timber division, until he retired in 1990.

Richard married his sweetheart Violet Anderson on October 1, 1949. They built their home near Port Townsend in 1948, where they raised their family.

He enjoyed hunting and fishing, especially with his two sons. After his retirement, he and Vi were inseparable. They enjoyed traveling, camping, gardening, and spending time with family until Vi’s death a year earlier in November of 2017.

He is preceded in death by his loving wife Violet Anderson, their infant daughter Carrie Kay, and his sister Ruby Wise.

Dick is survived by his sons Rick (Rhonda) Twiggs, Port Hadlock; Tim Twiggs, Port Townsend; daughter Jayne (Joseph) Johnson of St. Mary’s, Kansas; nine grandchildren, and sixteen great-grandchildren.

The family would like to thank the Jamestown S’Klallam Tribe, in which Richard was an Elder, Jefferson Healthcare Home Health and Hospice, and caregiver David Roscoe.

Private services will be held by the family at a later date.

Richard is now with Vi, together again and now everything is “just ducky.”

American Indian and Alaska Native rights. We must remain focused on our legal foundation to protect our political standing in America while we advance our Jamestown goals.

Political disappointments are frustrating, but we never get discouraged. We can never let politics redefine our rights.

Carrying forward my optimism for 2019, I firmly believe that we all have reason to enjoy excitement and confidence in what’s to come for our community, including the 7 Cedars Resort; Justice Center; Sweat Lodge at Jamestown; expanded Dungeness River Center; and new businesses, e.g., Cannabis Shop; Jamestown Seafood; Native Community Development Financial Institution (NCFDI), as well as our on-going Natural Resource projects to restore salmon stocks and our various services for our Tribal citizens.

We have accomplished a lot over the years and continue to strengthen our government, services and the business arm that advances our mission and goals for our community. I believe the actions of today build a strong foundation for our future generations. It requires patience and understanding as we balance community growth with political unity.

Please do not hesitate to call any of the Council members or me at (360) 681-4621 or e-mail me at rallen@jamestowntribe.org if you have any questions.

God bless,

W. Ron Allen
From the Election Committee

2019 is a Tribal Council election year, for the Chairman and Secretary positions. In February, we will send out Signature Verification Forms to anyone over age 18 who is not currently registered to vote, and a postcard verifying your registration to those who are currently registered. If you do not receive any mailing from us, please contact Amber at the reception desk, and give her your current address.

With your correct address and your current signature on file, you will automatically receive a ballot. Detailed information about running for office, and casting a vote, will be included in mailings later in the year.

For more information, call 360-681-4600 X-2029 or 1-800-262-6603 X-2029 and leave a message for Election Committee Chair Cathy MacGregor, or call Amber Almond Administration Receptionist and NR Program Assistant 360-681-4600 to leave a message.

2 P.M., IN THE WEST PARKING LOT
INDOOR RECEPTION TO FOLLOW

Cedar Forest-themed queen rooms, Salish Sea-themed king rooms, Canoe Journey-themed corner suites. The main floor will house a large lobby, conference/meeting/banquet space, a coffee bar and administrative offices. Northwest style with quality craftsmanship throughout, designed by Rice, Fergus Miller Architecture, will reflect the strength, harmony and timelessness of life on the Olympic Peninsula, the Tribe’s homeland since time immemorial. The Tribe’s goal is to enhance a visitor’s sense of this place, its history, and to offer an opportunity to experience the beauty and authenticity of our natural surroundings.

The project, originally slated to begin in 2008, was delayed due to the financial downturn. Now, ten years later, the design and infrastructure has been underway for more than a year, and the Tribe is thrilled to finally be able to begin construction. A service road connecting the Casino, Hotel, Longhouse Market, and Tribal campus has been under construction since July 2018, to allow employees and guests to travel between venues without entering the Highway 101 front guest entrance.

In November, 2019, the Tribe and the City of Sequim signed an Interlocal Agreement to connect the Tribe’s Blyn facilities to the City’s Class A Water Reclamation Facility at the east end of the City of Sequim. Included in the connection, funded by an $8.5 million loan from the US Department of Agriculture, are 7 Cedars Casino, the Longhouse Market and Deli, the Blyn Fire Station, the Tribe’s Public Safety and Justice Center (now under construction), the new resort hotel, and other Tribal administration and business structures in the Blyn basin. The wastewater connection, which will run along the south side of Highway 101, also includes excess capacity for future growth, but constitutes less than 6% of the Sequim facility’s total capacity.
Fishing and Hunting Code Changes Approved

Tribal Council recently approved two changes to Title 6: Fishing and Title 9: Hunting Code.

Title 6: Section 6.09.13 outlines the specific circumstances under which Tribal enforcement, biologists or fishers may incidentally take marine mammals, in accordance with NOAA regulations. It specifies first using non-lethal acts to prevent interference by marine mammals in the fishing operation, and then, the circumstances under which non-endangered marine mammals may be taken, and the reporting requirements when such an event occurs.

Title 9: Sections 9.05.01 - .04 outline appointing the Designated Tribal Hunter, as well as the Designated Hunter’s role in Hunting for Ceremonial Use, Hunting for Others, and Hunting for Tribal Elders.

All Tribal Code may be accessed on the Tribe’s website at http://www.jamestowntribe.org/govdocs/gov_code.htm.

Free 24-hour HAZWOPER Training:
Learn to Respond to Oil Spills
for Tribal Staff and Tribal Fishers
March 19, 20, 21 from 8 a.m.– 5 p.m., Hummingbird Hall

- When there is an oil spill or hazardous material spill to the environment, damage follows quickly. The more trained responders we have, the better. The faster first responders can act, with the best tools at hand, the better.
- This Hazardous Waste Operations and Emergency Response Training (HAZWOPER) will allow tribal staff and citizens who work on the water to assist in oil spill response and better represent their Tribe in the event of a hazardous material incident.
- This 3 day course is offered free of charge and each participant will receive a 24 hour HAZWOPER certification.
- Only HAZWOPER-certified Tribal personnel are allowed to assist in oil spill response and data collection even if the oil is on Tribal land! Non-certified personnel are NOT ALLOWED ON THE BEACH!

To register, contact Lori DeLorm at 360-681-4619 or ldelorm@jamestowntribe.org.

This training is hosted by the Jamestown S’Klallam Tribe and the Washington Department of Ecology.

Children, Youth, and Teen Holiday Dinner a Success!

(We thank you, our Important Friends and Relatives)

Our ?úŋast Giving Program was an amazing success! Thank you to staff and tribal citizens for your monetary and gift donations! Our Children, Youth, and Teen Holiday Dinner took place on December 19th with a fun-filled agenda. Families were able to participate in making crafts such as necklaces, beaded snowflake ornaments, and traditional tea making. The crafts were led by Cathy MacGregor (Reyes), Lana Kerr (Prince), Julie Powers (Prince), Michael Lowe (Lowe), Lisa Barrell (Johnson/Wood), and Mackenzie Grinnell (Prince). Crafts were followed by singing and dancing led by Jessica Humphries (Collier Family) and Loni Greninger (Prince Family), a delicious dinner prepared by Stephani Adams (Adams Family), and the gift giveaway. Michael Lowe became our nax̕sƛ̕ay̕əm kə́sməs swə́y̕qaʔ (Klallam Christmas Man) and passed out a gift to every family that attended. The youth were excited to take a photo with the Klallam Santa! The night ended with many gathering together to sing the Klallam Love Song. A total of 113 people attended this holiday dinner, which is a record high for a Children, Youth, and Teen Program event!

A special thank you to Liz Mueller and Vicki Wallner for allowing our event to use the amazing holiday decorations in Red Cedar Hall, and to all the staff who helped plan, set up, and clean up for this event!

New Children’s Program Assistant Cindy Sylvester

Cindy Sylvester is the new Children’s Program Assistant. Cindy, mother of 5 boys and 3 fur babies, is a descendant of James and Tammoe Woodman. She has lived all over the country but came back to her roots. Three of her boys attend the Tribe’s Children’s Youth Program. She has been taking care of kids for over 22 years. Cindy loves nature, majestic mountains, and flowing rivers. She is full of gratitude for children, crafting, the universe but most of all the Creator.
Tribe Offers Activities During Holiday Break

Children and youth who participated in the Tribe’s program activities during the two-week holiday vacation made talking sticks, had a talking circle and discussed ‘what it means to be a good friend’ in the Healing of the Canoe class.

Fostering Together
Our Community...Our Children
Learn how you can open your home to a Native Child in your community.

By opening your home to a Tribal youth:
- The Tribe can protect and promote the youth’s best interest.
- The Tribe can provide on-going connection to culture and traditions.
- The Tribe can often provide additional resources and support from Tribal Child Welfare Programs.

Fostering Together can help. Fostering Together is dedicated to helping ensure that every child has a safe place to stay. Homes that honor and support culture until children can return home are needed. If you are willing and able to become a resource for a family involved with child welfare, please contact us.

At Fostering Together, We are here to answer your questions, offer guidance to you during the licensing process and provide ongoing support after becoming a licensed foster parent.

Foster Parents are PROVIDED with the following:
- Support groups that help caregivers connect to share information and resources
- Training for caregivers and referrals for additional instruction
- Support foster parents at Family Team Decision-Making Meetings (FTDMs)
- Reimbursement process guidance
- Community resources and events
- A neutral bridge between the state or your private agency

All services are free to foster, adoptive and kinship caregivers.

Exhibit and Artist Reception for Carver Dusty Humphries

Artwork by Dusty Humphries, Sr. of the Jamestown S’Klallam (Collier) and Makah Tribes, will be on display in ʔaʔkʷustəŋáw̕txʷ House of Learning, Peninsula College Longhouse now through April 25. Humphries grew up watching his mother carve. He apprenticed under Jamestown S’Klallam Master Carver Jeff Monson during the creation of the Welcome Pole in 2010 on the Peninsula College campus and started producing his own art around the same time. He is now a carver for the Jamestown S’Klallam Tribe.

“This trade is not written down,” Humphries said. “You can’t read about it in a book. Our traditions are oral. We learn by sharing our traditions and being hands-on in the process,” he said.

His utilitarian wood carvings feature the use of positive and negative space which is an element of Coast Salish design.

For over a year Humphries has been working in the Tribe’s House of Myths on a 26-foot pole for the Jamestown S’Klallam Tribe, and will design and carve a second pole as well. When the project is finished there will be three poles to welcome the canoe pullers to the Jamestown Beach during Tribal Canoe Journeys.

A free artist reception will be held Friday, March 1 from 2:00 pm to 4:00 pm in the Longhouse. Winter gallery hours are Tuesday – Thursday, 10:00 am – 2:00 pm. For more information or to schedule a tour, contact longhouse@pencol.edu or (360) 417-7992.
Four Generations of Weavers

Weaving is a tradition so close to my heart. My grandmother, Elaine Grinnell, had taught me how to weave a cedar basket many years ago. For the last decade and a half, I have had the opportunity to learn from master weavers, such as Theresa Parker, and even teach at conferences myself. Our family is active in the NNABA (North West Native American Association) community. With four generations under one roof, the range of learning is broad. We teach the youngest generation the respect and appreciation we have for Cedar, while encouraging contact with the material to allow them to become comfortable, and familiar with it. Each of us were able to weave a hat, ask questions as they arose, share techniques, and share stories and laughs around the table. My grandmother is a big advocate for preserving tradition, and I feel as though each of her children and grandchildren have excelled at least one or more of the traditions she herself and others have taught to us, and encouraged to keep learning.

Program assistant Mack Grinnell and I are trying something new this year in the yəhúməct Traditional Foods and Culture Program. We’ve set aside the third Thursday and the fourth Saturday to take citizens and their families out to identify and possibly gather whatever is available during each month.

Gathering Opportunities
In February we will venture into the woods to identify usnea. Usnea is a lichen that grows on trees and can be made into a tincture to fight infections, decrease inflammation, pain, sore throat, and urinary tract infections, but if taken for prolonged periods may cause liver damage.

We should also be able to find lungwort, another lichen that usually grows on maple trees. Lungwort can be made into a tincture which can be used for respiratory ailments including coughs and colds. It can also be used for stomach and intestinal ailments and urinary tract problems.

We won’t be making any tinctures since neither Mack nor I are qualified to recommend any tinctures for medicinal use.

If we run across cottonwood buds, we will be gathering them. Yearly I infuse cottonwood buds in organic extra virgin olive oil for use throughout the year in salves. Cottonwood reduces inflammation and pain, eases pain of arthritis, sore muscles, sunburn, and chapped lips. The best buds are at the top of these trees that reach up to 200 feet, so it’s best to gather after a windstorm when the upper branches have broken off. You are welcome to join us for one or both, but they will be duplicate walks.

What: Walk in the Woods
Where: Meet in the lower parking lot of the Social and Community Services building.
When: Thursday, February 21st, 4:00 p.m.
Saturday, February 23rd, 10:00 a.m.
Dress accordingly, it may be wet. RSVP by the 21st and 23rd.

Calendar Cooks
Calendar Cooks is back from a break. We will no longer be cooking from the calendar, but there are plenty of other recipes which include traditional foods that we’d like to try out, and we’re keeping the group name until we can come up with a better one! In February we will be creating Kimberly Miller’s (Skokomish) Hazelnut, Huckleberry, salmon soup from the book, “Feeding the People, Feeding the Spirit: Revitalizing Northwest Coastal Indian Food Culture.”

No cultural activity is planned since we will be discussing plans for the coming months.

What: Calendar Cooks
Where: Lisa’s house
When: February 26th, 5:30
Please RSVP by 2/22 to Lisa Barrell (360-681-3418) or Mack Grinnell (360-681-3408) or access TeamReach app with the title Calendar Cooks, and group code Jstcooks.
I write to you with great pleasure. Blessings and may our great Creator bless you and family, and our great Tribe and country always.

Recently I attended training for Tribal Veterans Advocates at the NARA Wellness Center in Portland, OR. NARA stands for Native American Rehabilitation Association.

I was and am blessed to have met so many of our outstanding veterans and warriors who are so unstoppable, not only fighting in wars to protect our country and our freedoms and liberties, they also carry on and are fighting that which would destroy our country from the inside out.

The mission of the NARA is to provide education, physical and mental health services and substance abuse treatment that is culturally appropriate to Native American Indians, Alaska Natives and anyone in need. NARA’s vision is to achieve the highest level of physical, mental and spiritual well-being for American Indians and Alaska Natives (AI/AN).

NARA has been providing culturally-based services and support for AI/AN for over 40 years. In 1970 a small group of Native American and Alaska Natives realized that there was a need to offer hope and recovery for members of the AI/AN community who were struggling with addiction. NARA was created to address this need and to assure that AI/AN could access services offered by AI/AN practitioners. Since that time, NARA has evolved to include residential and outpatient substance abuse treatment, physical health care, mental health care, family support services and a range of cultural activities and supports.

I left my bunker (also known as my home) at 0700 hours headed to Portland. On my way there I made pre-arranged stops at my platoon’s position (also known as family member’s homes). I received a sit-rep (also known as a situation report) by visiting loved ones.

Well, back to the Tribal Veterans Advocate Training. The main items on day number one were culture, outreach, female veterans, suicide, mental health, and self-care. The second day’s focus was on trauma, homelessness in Portland, incarceration, two spirits (LGBTQ), and addiction. Each and every one of these topics was just lightly touched upon, but many great questions and some answers were discussed. All in all, this was and still is a very touching and disturbing training.

Most of all it brought back the thought that life is a full-contact sport, and I am either part of the answer or part of the problem.

So if I can be of any help connecting you with this or any other veterans program, let me know. My help is not just for our veterans; these things affect us all, but with our Heavenly Father’s help and our brothers’ and sisters’ support we can make a difference.

Reach Al at 360-434-4056.

Journey Home Classes are being offered in April!

All of these classes are required for all eligible Tribal Citizens who would like to access the Down Payment or Matched Savings Assistance programs to become homeowners. Classes will take place in the Fishbowl conference room in the Social and Community Services Building.

Native Film Night
RUMBLE: The Indians Who Rocked the World
Tuesday Feb 26 at 6 p.m. in Red Cedar Hall
RUMBLE: The Indians Who Rocked the World brings to light a profound and missing chapter in the history of American music: the Indigenous influence. Featuring music icons Charley Patton, Mildred Bailey, Link Wray, Jimi Hendrix, Jesse Ed Davis, Buffy Sainte-Marie, Robbie Robertson, Randy Castillo, and Taboo, RUMBLE shows how these pioneering Native musicians helped shape the soundtracks of our lives. The film won all three awards for feature-length documentary at the Canadian Screen Awards. Directed by Catherine Bainbridge and co-directed by Alfonso Maiorana, it picked up honors for Best Documentary Feature, cinematography and film editing. The wins for Rumble marked the first time that a film swept all three documentary categories at the Screenies. (POV Magazine)

Jamestown Reads Book Club
Prodigal Summer by Barbara Kingsolver
Wednesday, February 13 at 5:15pm
Location: The House of Seven Brothers restaurant at the Seven Cedars Casino
Kingsolver’s fifth novel is a hymn to wildness that celebrates the prodigal spirit of human nature, and of nature itself. It weaves together three stories of human love within a larger tapestry of lives amid the mountains and farms of southern Appalachia. Over the course of one humid summer, this novel's intriguing protagonists face disparate predicaments but find connections to one another and to the flora and fauna with which they necessarily share a place. (Goodreads)
Book for March: Devil in the White City by Erik Larson
Erik Larson—author of #1 bestseller In the Garden of Beasts—intertwines the true tale of the 1893 World's Fair and the cunning serial killer who used the fair to lure his victims to their death. (Available at the Tribal library or at the book club meeting.)

A presentation about S’Klallam Hunting
by Anthropologist Josh Wisniewski
Tuesday, February 19 at 6 p.m. in Red Cedar Hall

Dr. Josh Wisniewski, anthropologist for the Jamestown and Port Gamble S’Klallam Tribes, will discuss S’Klallam hunting, and anthropological descriptions of hunting in the context of treaty rights, treaty boundaries and the creation of "official" knowledge and counter narratives. Come learn what archeological, ethnographic and historical evidence can tell us about the occupation and usage of particular areas for hunting, fishing, and gathering, as well as the various trails that connected these sites and the Tribes of the Peninsula.

He received his professional training in both cultural anthropology and archeology from the University of Alaska, Anchorage, where he completed his B.A. and M.A. degrees. He completed his PH.D. in anthropology through the University of Alaska Fairbanks. Josh has lived in a traditional Inupiaq Eskimo subsistence hunting community documenting hunters’ knowledge and traditional hunting and resource management practices before coming to work for PGST. Estate Planning Workshops Continue
Thursday, February 14 from Noon-3 p.m., including lunch
Red Cedar Hall

In January we had Jamestown S’Klallam Tribal Elder and attorney Bill Trippett (Travers) and Janiece Rustin, Financial Planning Professional, as speakers for our first estate planning session. They explained probate, power of attorney, advanced care directives and other topics pertinent to estate planning. Tribal citizens in attendance received notebooks with forms for organizing their important documents, and information to help their families carry out their wishes or business needs. Lunch will be provided.

Thursday, March 14 from Noon-3 p.m.,
Red Cedar Hall 12

Jamestown Elder and attorney Bill Trippett (Travers) and Janiece Rustin, Financial Planning Professional, will once again be providing information, and answering legal questions regarding wills, trusts, guardianships and more. Drawing for those who are eligible for a $100 Costco gift card. Lunch will be provided.

Tribal Citizens, descendants, and family members are welcome to join the next two estate planning sessions. RSVP’s are appreciated for food planning purposes.

Featured Book
The Nature of Borders, the Salmon, Boundaries, and Bandits on the Salish Sea
by Lissa K. Wadewitz
This transnational history provides an understanding of the modern Pacific salmon crisis and is particularly instructive as salmon conservation practices increasingly approximate those of the pre-contact Native past. The Nature of Borders reorients borderlands studies toward the Canada-U.S. border and provides a new view of how borders influenced fishing practices and related management efforts over time. Dungeness River Audubon Center is a proud partner of Jamestown S’Klallam Tribe. In honor of Jamestown S’Klallam Federal Recognition day on February 10th, we are dedicating the month of February to learning more about the people who have lived and prospered on the Olympic Peninsula for more than 10,000 years. The S’Klallams’ rich culture is greatly based on the abundant natural resources of the Northwest Coast, one of those important resources being the Western Red Cedar tree. This series will take a deeper look at the tribe’s deep connection with “The Tree of Life.” These free programs begin at 5:30 p.m.

Where: Dungeness River Audubon Center
